School Officials Hope District Can Expand Art, Music Programs

At Westfield's elementary schools, teachers of art and music must juggle curriculum, students, and the ticking of the clock while using materials wheeled into a borrowed classroom on a cart.

Due to the complete absence of art and music classrooms at the elementary school level, "these teachers are really put to the test," revealed Board of Education President Darielle Walsh.

According to Mrs. Walsh, the board is very concerned about the unavailability of classrooms for art and music instruction. She said she hopes when enrollment decreases and sufficient space develops, that classrooms for these programs will be made available.

She noted that in the current art program, nicknamed "art in a cart," teachers carry their supplies with them and must instruct the class, present the project, clean up the classroom, and be mindful of the clock all at once.

"Supplies are often able to be stored in closets or any other nook or cranny in the school that is available," she explained. In most cases, kitchen

Mayor Takes Responsibility for Poll; Mrs. Vernick Questions Campaign Ethics

By PAUL J. PEYTON
Specially Written for The Westfield Leader

Confronted by a half a dozen or so residents Monday night, Westfield Mayor Thomas C. Jardim admitted his reelection campaign camp was responsible for a telephone survey conducted a few weeks ago which included negative comments directed at his Republican challenger, First Ward Councilwoman Gail S. Vernick.

According to several letters received and printed in this week's Westfield Leader, pollsters gave the impression to residents that it was a national poll since the firm (yet to be identified) was located in Washington, D.C.

The calls, though, quickly turned their focus to the three-way Westfield Mayoral race between Mayor Jardim, Republican opponent and Councilwoman Vernick, independent contender and former councilman Norman N. Greco.

Residents were reportedly asked to rank the job performance of Mayor Jardim and Mrs. Vernick. Callers sought the ethnic background of the resident and who they intended to vote for on Election Day. Call recipients repeated that the surveys were slanted towards the Mayor and against Mrs. Vernick.

Mayor Jardim said the costs for the poll were shared between the Westfield Democratic Party and the state Democratic Party.

While stating he saw the first draft of questions for the poll, the Mayor claimed he did not see the final version which included charges regarding her husband, Dr. Harris Vernick, which Mrs. Vernick said are false.

Mayor Jardim, who called the survey a "very unfortunate thing," said there were questions asked that he was "not aware of and that I disagreed with" in the actual survey.

Mrs. Vernick said she asked Mayor Jardim to make a public retraction on the survey at last week's council conference meeting.

She said the "misinformation" in the survey needed to be corrected. "The record needs to be set straight," she told the Mayor.

Mayor Jardim refused to divulge the name of the firm that conducted the poll, the scripts used and who okayed the final version of the questions when closely questioned by Republican Third Ward Councilman Neil F. Sullivan during the public meeting.

The Mayor said he would release the information if council members can show it relates to town business and if the Republicans release the name of the person responsible for last year's negative campaign literature against him, something he described as a "real piece of trash."

"I had your (Councilman Sullivan) name on it Councilman," the Mayor charged.

Councilman Sullivan noted that information on who paid for the piece was included on the literature in accordance with political campaign laws.

Getting back to the survey, Councilman Sullivan said he heard that "there may have been allegations made of impropriety by this council." Thus, he said, he would like to see the script of the poll to see whether that was the case.

Republican Second Ward Candidate Matthew P. Albano said he believes it "would be in the best interests of the town" if the script was released along with the identity of who authorized it.

Mrs. Vernick said a poll of this kind is not council business nor is the disclosure of the person or group responsible, especially when such a survey is done with the "primary objective" of trying to "diminish and discredit the opponent."

She said a poll of this kind aims to put doubts in the minds of voters over her candidacy. Mrs. Vernick called it a "very unethical poll."

Mayor Jardim explained that the poll was intended "to solicit residents' views on issues that affect them." He said he regretted that the poll moved into personal information.

The Mayor claimed that all questions asked, including the ones described as negative, were "factual."

Mrs. Vernick challenged that statement, stating she has proof indicating otherwise.

The issue was brought to light publicly when Jennifer L. Brandt of Tremont Avenue read aloud a letter to the council that she had sent to The Westfield Leader.

Ms. Brandt said she was "misled" by what she thought was a survey but then turned out to be no more than what she called "biased, erroneous and intentionally damaging information" about Mrs. Vernick.

Ms. Brandt said she strongly objects to "this type of campaigning and indirect mudslinging, especially at our local level."

In response, Mayor Jardim said he has had a private conversation with Mrs. Vernick regarding the survey.

He said he would not use any information from the survey and promised not to use negative campaign tactics this year.

"We have many important issues to discuss and I hope we won't be sidetracked," he continued.

The Mayor reminded residents that he was the "subject of some negative campaigning" in the 1997 election for mayor. He claimed that Republican council candidates "really threw some mud."

Mrs. Vernick indicated that by authorizing the survey, the Mayor had done a "disservice to the entire town."

Three years after home heating oil flooded the basement of a house belonging to Westfield residents Burton and Nancy Michaels during a routine oil delivery gone wrong, the Everson Place house sits vacant — and contaminated.

Since September 26, 1995, Mr. and Mrs. Michaels have lived the life of suburban vagabonds while fate decides who will pay the bills to right the wrong.

"Our nightmare continues," Mr. Michaels stated in a written statement, "and may be far from over."

The Michaels family, including two teenage daughters at the time, lived first in a hotel, then a rented house and now in an apartment in Westfield.

Westfield Foundation's Efforts Have Benefited Local Community for More Than Two Decades

KIMBERLY A. BROADWELL
Specially Written for The Westfield Leader

For over 20 years, the Westfield Foundation has served its residents by supporting a broad range of charitable activities within the Westfield community.

According to its Executive Director, Betsy Chance, the foundation supports local organizations which provide services to the community and enhance programs for Westfield. Ms. Chance said the foundation awarded its first grants in 1975, giving $450 to the Westfield Chamber of Commerce for holiday lights, and $150 to Westfield High School to defray students' college exam costs.

The foundation was started by a group of local citizens under the direction of former Westfield Mayor H. Emerson Thomas.

According to the latest published annual report, the Westfield Foundation currently has a governing body of 15 civic leaders which oversees the now $6 million used to provide organizations with their grants, award scholarships to local students, and help organizations manage funds.

The report also states that growth in the foundation's funds was enhanced in 1981 by a transfer of over $600,000 in assets from the Westfield Wallace Fund, and through 1994 gifts from the estates of Robert Rooke, totaling $400,000, and Nancy Reynolds, totaling $321,000.

The foundation also experienced growth through the addition of many individual endowment funds over the years, and by annual contributions from Westfield citizens, the Board of Trustees has confirmed.

Grants are awarded quarterly after applications are reviewed by the board's Selection Committee. According to Ms. Chance, criteria must be met before an applicant can become a grant recipient. This criteria includes serving Westfield residents and showing promise of making a significant contribution to the community.

Ms. Chance also stated that members of the board like to award money to those organizations which are starting new programs or trying to meet a specific need at a crucial time.

The foundation is also particularly favorable to groups which sponsor education, arts and other cultural activities; civic, health and human services; community development and historic preservation to the community, stated Ms. Chance.

The Westfield Foundation also aids organizations by managing funds. Local groups such as the Rotary Club of Westfield, Friends of the Westfield Memorial Library, Youth and Family Westfield and the Westfield Volunteer Rescue Squad.

According to the foundation's President, Frank A. MacPherson, the organization currently has 64 differ-

Counseling Service and the Westfield Day Care Center, among others, have funds managed by the foundation.

According to foundation records, more than 90 groups have received grant moneys over the years, including Friends of Mindowaskin Park, Friends of the Westfield Library, Franklin Elementary School, Habitat for Humanity, Mobile Meals of ent funds in accounts which are invested by Merrill Lynch. Mr. MacPherson said the money is invested conservatively, with approximately 50 percent invested in stocks and 30 percent in fixed income bonds. The rest is used for cash.

Ad Hoc Committee Differs on Best Use Of County Grant

By PAUL J. PEYTON
Specially Written for The Westfield Leader

Members of the Ad Hoc Committee on Parks and Fields, created by Mayor Thomas C. Jardim, are split on how best to spend $200,000 in town funds and a matching "Project Pocket Park" grant from the Union County government.

While all four members agree to spending $120,000 of that sum for improvements at Sycamore Field, First Ward Councilman Gregory S. McDermott and Recreation Director Glenn Burrell support spending the additional $80,000 on improvements at Tamaques Park.

Third Ward Councilman John J. Walsh and Recreation Commission member Sal Antonelli, however, favor spreading these funds among five smaller projects, which do not include Tamaques.

The town is set to receive a check for $117,500 as part of the "Project Pocket Park" program initiated by the county Board of Chosen of Freeholders this year.

While $17,500 from the county is set to be used to upgrade the playground behind the former Lincoln School building on Westfield Avenue, the town has yet to earmark where the remaining funds will be spent.

The funds were originally slated for creation of a park on the former site of the Excellent Diner on North Avenue. However, when the property's owner won approval from the Planning Board to develop an office building on the property, the park became a moot point.

While Mr. McDermott and Mr. Burrell support improvements endorsed in the town's capital improvement budget, Mr. Walsh and Mr. Antonelli want the funds used for new projects.

As per a reported compromise reached between committee members, Mr. McDermott noted in his report to the Town Council that it is not the responsibility of the committee "to negotiate or compromise on our particular agendas."

In a more detailed report, Mr. Walsh said that a change by Mr. McDermott and Mr. Burrell to support improvements at Tamaques Park, in lieu of smaller projects such as plantings in Clark Park and creation of a small park on Central Avenue, "puts us

Mayor Takes Responsibility For Poll; Ethics Questioned

Democratic Councilman John J. Walsh, who is seeking reelection in the Third Ward, said that while he thinks that Democrats were responsible for the survey, he failed to see how the survey could affect any law that might be passed by the council in the future.

His Republican challenger, Noreen Lund of Tudor Oval and a 43-year Westfield resident, said she finds it "quite offensive" that local political campaigns "have gotten to this level."

Sharon H. Rodgers of Everson Place, another person who received a survey call, said the poll "rapidly turned into a 'pro you (Mayor Jardim) anti-Vernick' with statements and questions 'that were intended to be derogatory.'"

Ms. Rodgers said she found the whole thing "appalling." "I found it...unnerving. I mean, we are all used to seeing this kind of sleazy stuff on the national level. But we don't need it in Westfield," she said.

Beatrice Scully of Washington Street said she strongly objected to a question asked about her ethic background.

"I feel this was an insult to me and everyone else who was polled," she said. "You (Mayor Jardim) owe the people of Westfield an apology."

Mayor Jardim responded that, "it is not in my being and not in my constitution" to use material from the survey in his campaign materials.

Karen Mortinson of Sinclair Place, press secretary for Mrs.

Vernick's campaign, said to Mayor Jardim, "You've done your damage." She called the poll "disgraceful."

When questioned as to her roll in the Vernick campaign by Councilman Walsh, she shot back, "I don't share the shenanigans of the Democrats of this town and when you people clean your act up, I'll support you." Mrs. Mortinson revealed that she was a Democrat.

Councilman Lawrence Goldman, Chairman of the town's Democratic Committee and a candidate for reelection in the Fourth Ward, said in a statement to The Leader that he had a "distaste (for) negative campaigning of any kind." Asking the council to move on with town business, he said the Democrats would not use council meetings as a "political forum."

Making a comment on the poll separately, Mr. Greco said, "If what was stated is factual, I am disappointed to see the direction that this race is taking. However, I choose to focus on the important issues that face our town."

Ken Rotter, Campaign Manager for Mayor Jardim and a candidate last year for the Democrats in the Third Ward, described the poll as a "small, random sampling of Westfield residents."

"Questions tested the issues which I perceived to be the strongest positives and the strongest criticisms of both Mayor Tom Jardim and his opponents," said Mr. Rotter through a prepared statement issued to The Leader.

He said the poll "tested opinions concerning some of the criticisms leveled by Republicans against Mayor Jardim as well as some potential criticism of his Republican opponent."

"What must be remembered is that this was a poll - a survey of opinion. In my view, a poll that tests potential criticisms, can not be equated with the scurrilous and factually untrue literature published by the Republican Town Committee about our Mayor in last year's election."

Ad Hoc Committee Differs On Best Use of County Grant

back to square one as far as making a joint recommendation to the council."

Councilman McDermott said in a report to the governing body that he would like improvements funded at Sycamore Field and Tamaques Park, as well as an open picnic shelter at the park.

The council, he said, has allocated half the funding for the $120,000 Sycamore project in the 1998 municipal budget. The balance would be provided through $60,000 in matching county grant funds.

The project would include re-grading, seeding and sprinkler systems.

The picnic shelter, estimated to cost between $50,000 and $55,000, would consist of a roof and a floor with tables and seats added.

Councilman Walsh noted that the project was included in the town's capital budget this year.

According to Councilman McDermott, "The council has already allocated $27,500 into the 1998 budget. The additional $27,500 will be from the county money."

"Both Sycamore Field and the Tamaques shelter are ideal projects for this type of county funding because the council, during its 1998 budget meetings, did not specifically allocate 100 percent of the project costs. The matching funds are now available," said Mr. McDermott.

Mr. Walsh said he had "a great deal of difficulty agreeing to $120,000 for Sycamore, when I realized that the proposal does not include a fence or a playground."

"In short, it gives a great deal of money to soccer, with nothing to baseball or to the surrounding neighborhood, and is a lopsided allocation of precious resources," he said.

Based on this reasoning, Mr. Walsh said he believes the funding of Tamaques improvements should come from grant funds allocated to Sycamore, "and not the little projects" such as bathrooms at Gumpert Park.

Mr. McDermott said the balance of the funds, $25,000 split from town and county funds, could fund field improvements at Tamaques. The fields are used for baseball, softball (both men's and women's leagues), and football.

"By improving these fields, we restore pride back into a community which is demanding better playing facilities," said Councilman McDermott.

Mr. Walsh and Mr. Antonelli support the Sycamore proposal, along with the planting of trees, benches, shrubs and plaques at Clark Park, at a cost of $5,000.

They also are supportive of a "touch and scent" garden for the handicapped and wheelchair-bound at the corner of Rahway Avenue and Shadowlawn Drive, at a cost of $20,000, as proposed by the Rake and Hoe Garden Club of Westfield.

They also favor spending $5,000 for a small "pocket park" on Central Avenue, as recommended by former Mayor Ray Stone, and $5,000 for creation of a park in honor of performing artist and human rights advocate Paul Robeson at the corner of Watterson Street and Rahway Avenue.

Another $50,000 would be used to fund new bathrooms at Gumpert Field, as sought by the Westfield Baseball League.

Proposals on how to spend the grant funds were received at a fact-finding session held early last month.

Mayor Jardim said he would like to get a final report or reports by the council's next conference meeting this Tuesday, October 6, so that governing body members can begin discussion on the committee recommendations.

WESTFIELD POLICE BLOTTER

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 21

• A Wyoming Street resident reported that someone threw a large cobblestone through the front window of his home, smashing wood and glass. No one was injured.

Neighbors reported seeing a large, light-colored vehicle with a New Jersey license plate outside the house around the time the incident occurred. A young, white male was witnessed entering the passenger side of the automobile before it left the scene, according to police.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 22

• Menotti Lembo, 66, of Westfield was arrested at Barchester Way and charged with driving while intoxicated and possession of an open container in a motor vehicle, authorities said. He was released on $600 bail.

• Nicholas Sheikovitz, 18, and a 16-year-old male, both from Staten Island, were arrested at the intersection of South Avenue and Boulevard and charged with possession of less than 50 grams of marijuana, according to police.

Sheikovitz was released on $250 bail. The juvenile was turned over to a responsible adult, authorities said.

• A Summit Avenue resident reported that someone forcibly entered his car and stole a T-top and a radar detector.

• The facade of a Central Avenue business was damaged with spray paint, according to police.

• Authorities revealed that someone spray-painted the McKinley Elementary School building on First Avenue.

• A New York City resident reported that someone scratched the entire right side of her car with an unknown sharp object while it was parked on Jefferson Street.

• A woman was injured while driving south on Mountain Avenue after a large object was hurled at her vehicle from a parked car on Kimball Avenue, authorities revealed.

The object broke the upper left corner of her windshield, causing the victim to be sprayed in the face and eyes with flying glass. She was transported by the Westfield Volunteer Rescue Squad to Overlook Hospital in Summit, where she was treated and released.

Authorities are investigating the incident, although no arrests had been made as of press time.

• A woman reported the theft of her purse, which she discovered was missing after she returned from an Elm Street supermarket.

The purse, minus $115 in cash, was later recovered at the Cranford Post Office, authorities said.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 28

• A convenience store on Central Avenue was burglarized, during which a cash register, $700 in cash, and $1,000 in cigarettes were stolen. Entry was gained by smashing the front door of the premises, authorities said.

• A Mountinside resident reported the theft of a bicycle valued at approximately $400, which had been locked at the north side Westfield Train Station.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 29

• A cash register, lottery machine, and two cartons of cigarettes were reported stolen from a convenience store on North Avenue, East, according to police.

The lottery machine was later recovered in the vicinity of the railroad tracks near the store.

Officials Hope to Expand Art and Music Programs

space was used to dry art projects or to keep them stored, according to Mrs. Walsh.

The school board President said the crisis of non-existent classrooms for art and music was broached during discussions of projects to be included under the Strategic Plan.

Linda King, Fine Arts Director for the Westfield public school district, agreed that planning for dedicated classroom space for art and music education "was raised as a priority."

When asked by The Westfield Leader about the possible expansion of classrooms during the next five years, pending approval of a proposed $11.7 million referendum, Ms. King stated, "We are hoping that the fine arts programs will be included in that."

She stressed that "art in a cart" or "music in a cart" is "not going to give you as much as a classroom, but our teachers are outstanding and, in fact, they are doing more right now in this situation by trying to provide instruction under these circumstances."

Ms. King explained that the music program includes a teacher who has music on a compact disk/record player, and stores books in classrooms or on the carts, and walks into classrooms ready to instruct students.

She added that instrumental instruction is often conducted in a school hallway, kitchen, behind stages or curtains in auditoriums, or while physical education classes are taking place. She noted that, at times, "the class will get bumped from one place to another."

She revealed that in the last school year, only two elementary schools - Wilson and Tamaques - had regular, dedicated classroom space. These schools have since lost this space, however, due to increased enrollment, she said.

Dr. William J. Foley, Superintendent of Schools, explained that exactly 12 classrooms would be needed for both music and art programs, in order to provide adequate, dedicated classroom space.

"I think there is a better chance of being able to add classrooms if the referendum is passed," stated Dr.

Foley, adding that without the referendum, "it's not going to happen."

He said he hoped classroom space could be made available sometime after 2003 if the referendum was passed.

Concerning the art program, Dr. Foley observed that "teachers place their supplies on a cart. This limits the mediums that they (the students) can work in. There is not a lot of painting, not a lot of work with clay or fancy projects. It is mostly paper...simpler mediums." He described it as a "shorter, prescribed program."

The Superintendent noted that, with the music program, "teachers can only bring in instruments that are very portable," such as bells and recorders, along with offering vocal instruction.

He said that keyboards would be made available if a regular classroom was provided, adding that musical notation is also not taught as extensively as it could be.

"Kids with an interest in art will still be able to expand their interests in after school programs," Dr. Foley explained. "We live in a community where our parents provide a supplement to what the schools provide."

When asked about the cultivation of these programs at the elementary level, as a prelude to instruction at the intermediate schools and the high school, where regular classrooms are available, Dr. Foley stated, "We (the schools) provide a basic program, but it is limited."

At Westfield High School, students may choose Art 1, 2, 3, or 4, Crafts or Ceramics for art enrichment. The high school's music program includes Marching Band, Color Guard, String Orchestra, Symphonic Orchestra, Choir, Mixed Chorus, Writing and Arranging 1 and 2, Freshman Chorus, Wind Ensemble, Choraleers and Chorale.

Several of the elementary schools' Internet web pages feature artwork by elementary students. Jefferson, McKinley, Wilson and Tamaques Elementary Schools are just a sampling of those which provide Internet "art galleries" where students and parents can view their "masterpieces."

ment committee that meets bi-annually to oversee how Merrill Lynch is investing the money.

According to Ms. Chance and Mr. MacPherson, there are currently 10 new funds which have recently been established by the foundation. The new unrestricted funds include the Charles W. Anderson Fund, the Lee and Anne Hale Fund and the Sitzer Family Fund. These will be added to existing non-restricted funds to benefit local programs and projects through the grants award program.

Three funds which have been established to benefit local programs are the Nancy McElroy Memorial Fund to benefit the Youth and Family Counseling Service; the Rivett Rescue Squad Fund, set up to provide income to the Westfield Volunteer Rescue Squad, and the Santoriello Family Fund, which will help meet emergency needs in Westfield.

The two new scholarships being managed by the foundation are the Helen Bell McMartin Scholarship Fund and the Liesja Tortorello Memorial Fund to benefit graduating seniors of Westfield High School.

Lastly, the Woman's Club of Westfield and the Westfield Lacrosse Club have established endowment funds which are currently being managed by the foundation.

This past Monday, trustees of the Westfield Foundation awarded their fourth quarter grants in the amount of $53,100 to area groups, including the Youth and Family Counseling Service for a continuation of parenting skills workshops; Visiting Health Service for upgraded computer equipment; Union County College for sponsorship of three adult education classes held at the Senior Citizens Housing; the Alzheimer's Association for in-home therapy sessions for Westfield area residents; the Cranford Dramatic Club for roof replacement, and the Westfield "Y" Black Achievers program for sponsorship of its annual banquet.

"The Westfield Foundation is still the best kept secret in town," stated Ms. Chance.

"Even though we have been managed for almost 25 years, some people don't know we are here," added Mr. MacPherson. "We want the community to know that we are here, to continue to help meet the needs of Westfield," he concluded.
