

Wardlaw-Hartridge to Offer Computer Classes for Seniors

EDISON—Responding to a growing interest, the Wardlaw-Hartridge School in Edison will again be conducting summer computer classes for senior citizens during July.

The program, initially offered during the 1997-1998 school year, has been expanded to the summer through a grant from the John H. Van Winkle Foundation.

All seniors, aged 50 and over are invited to participate. Six one-week sessions will be offered on Windows 95, Macintosh for Beginners, and how to "surf the net."

The classes will be conducted under the direction of Rhona Eserner, head of the Computing Department, and Bob Vietor, himself an octogenarian and a computer instructor at the school.

The summer schedule is as follows:

- Monday through Friday, July 12 to 16, "Windows 95 for Beginners," "How Do I Use My Mac?," and "How to Use the Internet."

- Monday through Friday, July 19 to 23, "Microsoft Office for PC" and "ClarWorks for Mac."

- Monday through Friday, July 26 to 30, "Using the Internet."

Each class will meet from 9 to 11 a.m. Class size is limited to 12 students. Only one class may be taken each week, and there is a registration fee of $50 per class.

For further information about the summer program, please call Ms. Eserner at (908) 668-5270, or (908) 754-1882, Extension No. 417, to register.
