

Boy Scouts Form Largest Council in New Jersey

MOUNTAINSIDE — The consolidation of two Boy Scouts of America councils into the Patriot's Path Council has created the largest Boy Scout Council in New Jersey, and the fourth largest on the Eastern Seaboard.

The new Patriot's Path Council was formed from the union of the Watchung Area Council, based in Mountainside, and the Morris-Sussex Council, based in Denville.

The joining of the two councils was accomplished after several years of discussions and negotiations between the boards of the two councils, and was designed to improve the availability of scouting programs.

An open house to unveil the new council logo and Vision Statement was held on Tuesday at the Wyatt Service Center in Mountainside.

The area covered by the new council includes more than 90 communities in Somerset, Morris, Union and Sussex counties, plus Dunellen, Middlesex Borough, Piscataway and South Plainfield in Middlesex County.

Headquarters for the newly-formed council is at the Wyatt Service Center in Mountainside. Trading Posts for scout supplies are maintained at the Wyatt Service Center and at the former Morris-Sussex Council headquarters at 12 Mount Pleasant Turnpike in Denville.

More than 25,000 Boy and Cub Scouts and 7,000 adult leaders are served by the new council.

The new council has four major camps, which were attended by more than 4,300 scouts this year. Camp Somers and Camp Wheeler are located in the 973-acre Mount Allamuchy Scout Reservation in Stanhope. The 450-acre Camp Winnebago is located in Rockaway and Sabattis Adventure Camp is located on 1,240 acres in the heart of the 6,000,000-acre Adirondack Forest Preserve in New York.

Two Cub Scout day camps are held each year in the Watchung Reservation in Mountainside, and at Camp Wheeler.

Staffing for the new council includes 15 program professionals, four camp rangers and 22 program administration personnel.

John E. Kane of Westfield is President of the new council, Sheldon O. Jones of Basking Ridge is Executive Vice President, John Glockner of Westfield is Council Commissioner and Dennis J. Kohl of Andover is Scout Executive.

In addition, there are more than 70 executive board members who represent the various communities in the council area.

The new council has an operating budget of $3,500,000. Of this total, 62 percent is used for program support, 24 percent for camp operations, 7 percent for fundraising, and 7 percent for administration and support.
